VIENTIANE Laos, Feb. 26 (AP).—North Vietnamese troops have sighted in what appears to be a pincer movement toward the two main Laotian government strongholds west of the Platne Jarres, informed sources said today,

In the path of the North Vietnamese advance are Long Cheng. fortress headquarters of Gen. Vang Pao's 10,000-man guerrilla army of Meo tribesmen, which is fighting on the Laotian government side, and Sam Thong, ten miles south, a main air-supply base for northern Laos. Loss of those two bases would virtually cancel government ground resistance to the Communist drive that began three weeks ago and has seen the fall of one Laotian ootpost after another. The Plaine des Jarres fell to the North Vietnamese last week. The sources said the Hanoi forces would probably strike also at the vital junction of routes 7 and 13, enabling them to cut the road linking Vientiane with the royal capital at Luang Prabang.

Meanwhile, government troops were reported to have vacated post-tions on the 7,077-foot mountain of Phou Khe, six miles west of Kieng Khoangville on the south-eastern side of the plain. Sources said there was fighting during the evacuation of the mountain. No casualty figures were available.

Retreating government soldiers clashed with a Communist force, numbering possibly 300-500 men, about 12 miles southwest of the plain and moving toward Long Cheng and Sam Thong. But no casualties were reported.

COCOA, Fla., Feb. 36 (AP).—A Cocoa woman claims she distributed four perfect bridge hands in a single deal—something the "Guinness Book of World Bridge" says could happen once in a trillion years if everyone in the world played every day.

Mrs. Jack Greenway said the deal came yesterday as her bridge group played at the Cocoa-Rockledge Country Club.

Mrs. Greenway said in the opening game she found she had dealt herself 13 spades. To her further amazement, she said, she had dealt 13 diamonds to Mrs. James Purgason, 13 bearts to Mrs. R.B.

Deaton and 13 clubs to Mrs. Myron Stevens.

Mrs. Greenway said, "Mrs. Stevens thought it was sort of a joke and the other two girls just did not believe it. But I dealt the hands so I knew it was for real."

Mrs. Purgason confirmed the phenomenal hand and said persons at five other bridge tables witnessed the event.

The monthly bridge gathering continued play after the perfect hand. Mrs. Greenway said, and she did not realize the full impact of the deal until later that night,

By Souren Melikian

DARIS, Feb. 26.—The auction of 18th-century paintings, furniture and objets d'art to be held at the Hotel Drouot March 5 by Raymond de Nicolay will be one of the highlights of the season.

There will be top-quality objects in widely different categories—old masters, medieval tapestries and art objects and 18th-century French furniture at its very best.

The high point of the auction will come with the sale of three sets of tapestries. The earliest is a set of four, of Tournai, showing scenes of bird-immting with allegorical overtones. The set was woven around 1500.

Mr. de Nicolsy can't remember any tapestries illustrating this subject on sale in Europe or America for the past ten

Vivid Colors

Considering their period, their condition is highly satisfactory and the colors are still vivid. A second set of three tapestries belongs to the earliest production of the Beauvais factories in the late 17th century. Both sets are worthy of the leading museums, few of which can boast bird-hunting scenes. The third set of tapestries, of good quality but not as rare, dates from the 18th century and the Flemish artist Teniers. Art objects and furniture include quite a few pieces which have unusual features in addition to their esthetic merits. A huge bracket-clock (cartel d'applique), decorated with painted garlands of flowers in typical Louis XV taste, has a case signed by Nicolas Heurtaut-a rare occurrence-and the dial bears the signature of Noël Baltazar who was received into the guild of his craft as master

Satyr Heads

A Louis XVI ormolu chandelier, each light of which is supported by satyr heads with tongues hanging out of their mouths, is remarkable and a Dutch brass chandelier, about six feet high, is sure to end up in a museum

The furniture—with a pair of moon-crescent shaped Louis XVI commodes, signed by Dubois, and a few other major pieces—is just as glamorous.

The portrait of Madame Boucher by François Boucher, a well-known work which once belonged to the Wertheimer collection, will be sold. Foster reproduced it in his book "French Art From Watteau to Proudhon" (London, 1906) and it has been reproduced many times since then.

Few paintings are so typical of the 18th-century mood. The oval portrait shows the artist's wife holding her pet dog. The young lady has a well-fed, smug look which is slightly exasperating to the modern

Academic Painting

The portrait is the quintessence of academic painting. In recent years, the style has made a comeback, largely due to the considerable rarefaction of old masters. This portrait's estimated value stands at $40. 000. The price is no doubt reasonable but only a museum is likely to stick it up on its Several fine drawings and pastels, some of which are by Jean-Baptiste Huet and Nicolas Cochin, are part of the same collection. These provide a delightful idea of the dainty 18th-century atmosphere.

Another remarkable thing about this auction is the way in which it was built up. Mr. de Niceolay was appointed auctioneer only 18 months ago and is one of the youngest members in the profession. He said that he put together three important collections, one including the paintings, the second the objets d'art and the third the three separate sales. Nevertheless be was right to choose concentration rather than dispersion for this meets the modern conditions of art dealing. Not only is this accumulation bound to make a big hit but it will spare the wealthy—and the not-sowealthy-buyers the trouble of making several trips to Paris.

On March 4, Bondu is having a fine sale at Drouot with two excellent although restored landscapes by Francesco Guardi and some very good furniture and silverwork. But the most charming of sales is to be held Saturday at 35 Rue Fortuny, Paris-17. The hôtel particulier of Sarah Bernhardt, the 19th-century ectress, is to be sold. Its decoration, done by Emmanuel Fremiet (1824-1910), has preserved the image of medieval and Renaissance decoration as it was understood in the 19th century. In spite of the fine carvings and period furniture, it all looks like a setting for a medieval novel by Sir Walter

The Faces of Antigone

President Pompidou addressed a joint session of Congress which was something short of a full turnout of legislators. The impolite and impolitic announcements by a few congressmen that they would boycott the sitting called attention to this fact; it also became plain that such ceremonials are seldom attended by all the lawmakers, and that, indeed, it is common practice to paper the House with sundry friends, family and official attendants. Mr. Pompidou fared no worse than most of his predecessors in this respect, and France was certainly not insuited in his person.

His address capsulized, very competently, the foreign policy his government pursues and, within the limits of the occasion, pointed up some of the major differences between that policy and the course of his hosts. In respect to Vietnam, the reference to such differences was oblique; on the Middle East, it was more direct. The French president's remarks made it plain, again, that France, like the Soviet Union, wante Israel to renounce its military gains without guaranties, while the Soviet Union, the United States, France and Great Britain work out general conditions for a settlement and for guaranties to preserve it.

The United States would agree with Mr. Pompidou that Israel'e military successes are "precarious and in the long run barren." But in the light of the history of the past 20 years, America also appreciates why Israel is convinced that neither the UN nor the Big Four have been able to present any acceptable alternatives; that while both France and the Soviet Union may be sincerely desirous of assuring Israel its right to existence, to security and the "free exercise of all the rights of an independent and sovereign state," neither country has done very much (recently, at least) in the direc-

In other words, while President Pompidou aptly quoted Antigone-"My vocation is not hatred, but love"-in an imperfect world, Antigone has many faces, The United States bears no hatred toward the Arab; France no hatred toward the Israeli. But each has different ways of showing its love, and to the Arab, as to the Israeli, it is the difference that is important, rather than the common desire for peace.

Presumably, in his private discussions with President Nixon, Mr. Pompidou was more specific about his hopes and fears for the Middle East; possibly ways to bridge the difference were explored. But behind the negotiations of the powers lie the harsh facts of the case, the growing fanaticism of the parties most directly concerned. The need for ameliorative action is undoubtedly urgent, but neither the form nor the substance of such action have emerged with any

Can We Afford to End the Draft?

As the debate warms up on the proposed all-volunteer armed forces, there is a good deal of talk about the risks of such a drastic innovation running counter to our national experience. As the President's commission netes in its current report, however, the draft is a holdover from two world wars and the subsequent cold war which led to largescale military operations in Korea and Vietnam, Otherwise, an all-voluntary army has been our national policy because it reflects the nature of our society and the essence of our political principles.

It is quite proper, therefore, to direct the debate toward the question of whether it is feasible under present conditions to revert to our historic policy, The President's commission of eminent national figures, headed by former Secretary of Defense Thomas Gates, says that it is feasible in addition to being highly desirable. "A return to an allvolunteer force," it contends, "will strengthen our freedoms, remove an inequity now imposed on the expression of the patriotism that has never been lacking among our youth, promote the efficiency in the armed forces, and enhance their dignity."

Much of the steam goes out of the argument against drastic changes when it is realized that the pre made up predominantly of volunteers. About 500,000 men offer their services to the armed forces every year, and the commission concludes that at least half of them do so without thought of getting ahead of the draft. If this is a correct assessment, an all-volunteer force of 2.5 million men could be achieved by bringing in an additional 75,000 out of the 1.5 million who turn 19 every year. That would seem to be entirely feasible if the additional incentives and improved recruiting methods were provided.

The strongest argument advanced by the Gates Commission is that the gross inequities of the present eystem must be corrected. Net only does that system put the finger of Uncle Sam on a limited number of young men who must risk their lives in defense of their country, it imposes on these same young men a "tax-in-kind" which averages about $3,600 per capita each year. This results from the fact that men entering the services are paid only about 60 percent of what they would earn in civilian life. In effect they are subsidizing the nation in the sum of about $2 billion a year. It is not a burden that is imposed uniformly among all young men in the same age bracket. Those singled out for this special "tax-inkind" amount to only about 8 percent of the males who reach 19 each year. And they are forced to bear a financial burden about three times as great as comparable civilians who are not required to risk their lives.

This inequity cries to high heaven. We think the Gates Commission is entirely right in eaying that it should be wiped out as promptly as possible regardless of what is Nixon's proposal for a velunteer done about the draft. To this end, it recommends a pay increase from $180 to $315 a month for military personnel during the first two years of service. With that inequity matter look alarmingly over-corrected, the commission believes, draft optimistic. But the real danger is calls could be reduced to zero.

A question remains as to where the estimated $2.7 billion needed for this purpose will be found in the tight budgetary outlook for 1971. The commission insists that the net effect of its recommendations will to be profoundly influenced by the be to lower the cost of the armed forces by way men make their wars. Even reducing turnover and training costs, imroving efficiency and so forth. But the transfer of the so-called "tax-in-kind" on new servicemen to taxpayers in general will men fall off their horses, unless involve political problems that may not be readily solvable.

One other dividend from the proposal field by heavy-armed horsemen. demands thoughtful consideration. The commission would maintain a "standby draft system" which could be activated by joint resolution of Congress at the request of the President. In other words, the President would have to go to Congress and face the public debate on drafting men for military service if he should launch a major military operation abroad. At precent he can simply step up the draft quotas, as President Johnson did to support troops for Vietnam. This aspect of the proposal should have a special appeal for a Congress that is now eagerly seeking means of ehecking the President's ability to make war on his own responsibility.

WASHINGTON. - Since serious change a great many things behistory has been virtually abandoned in the history departments ef many American universities, this report is bound to seem eccentric to some people. Yet you really have to use the light of history to see the danger of President

So far as these have been revealed, the calculations of the President's commission to study this not that the scheme will not work. The danger is, rather, that it will work well enough, but with deeply noxious social and political side effects.

All of history teaches, in fact, that the forms of human life tend

Pecheneg Invention

Hence it was an epochal event when stirrups were first brought to Europe and the Middle East rather late in the era of barbarian invasions, and most probably by the obscure but savage tribe called the Pechenegs, But it seems unlikely that an early Byzantine general, getting ready to fight off the Pechenegs, can have said to himself: "The stirrups these awful people have brought from the Far East Asian steppes are likely to

Sheer umpredictability is, therefore, one factor to consider. Anether factor is the way that great social changes flow from military changes, where this link can be more clearly discerned, Here, the story of classical Greece is the best Very crudely speaking, the cavalry carried the main burden of battle in the early period when the horse-owning aristocrats ruled most of the Greek city-states. Then came the era of the heavy-armed infantry; and the more advanced states therefore ousted the aristocrats, and adopted the so-called "hoplite franchise"—which meant giving control of the state to the persons able to afford infantry

Without a military-industrial complex, after all, no nation nowadays can possibly be a serious nuclear power. The French and British, for instance, have the knowhow to be serious nuclear powers. The French also have the desire. But both lack the wherewithal to pay for an adequate military-in-dustrial complex, whereas this country and the Soviet Union have the wherewithal,

The Soviet Way

The people who cry out against military-industrial complex have focused on the supposed power of the complex in this country. But what would they be saying if the generals in the Pentagon had vetoed the appointment of the civilian, Meivin Laird, and had instead insisted on Gen. German Labor Tandem To East-West Talks

By Arnold Beichman

pirouette their way gingerly to some kind of an East-West rendezvous, the trade unions of West and East Germany are doing their own thing in tandem with their respective governments. The vagueness in the foregoing paragraph is unavoidable because the negotiations between the powerful, Socialist-oriented West German Labor Federation, DGB, and the Communist-controlled East German grouping, PDGB, move at the same deliberate pace as the negotiations between both governments.

The only reason for describing the inter-union discussions is that they reflect what must be the difficulties, fairly well concealed, between Bonn and Pankow as pressure grows to discuss what, if anything, should or could be done about divided Germany.

If anything were to demonstrate the intermingling of West German trade unionism, and the Brandt government foreign policy, it is in the DGB's Ostpositik as evidenced in an exchange of letters between the two national trade-union centers.

The West German DGB letter, dated Feb. 4, was addressed to A.H. Warnke, president of the East German FDGB, Heins O. Vetter, DGB president who sent the letter, said that in an effort to help workers and maintain peace, the DGE had inaugurated a series of contacts with trade unions in Warsaw Pact countries. These contacts had their beginning with DGB meetings in Moscow last December with A. N. Shelepin, former Soviet secret police chief and now head of the Soviet trade unions.

Criticism Barred

Vetter assured Warnke that the DGB had no intention of mixing "in the affairs of other states" and, further, that all intervention in the jurisdiction of another labor organization "is incompatible with the peaceful coexistence and the right of eclf-determination of mem-bers within their ewn unions. One can properly interpret Vetter's etatement as a guarantee of East German immunity from criticism as to its labor policies, one of which admittedly is suppression of free collective bargaining and free-This may be an unjust in-

How Berlin Was Eclipsed

WASHINGTON.—Of all problems exchange of full information with Washbequeathed by the 1939-1945 ington or London, and this at a time when war, the least necessary and the most puzzling is surely Berlin France was supposed te be cooperating which, small as it is, like Tenny-son's "flower in the crannied wall," closely with these powers in seeking a Middle symbolizes much more.

The partition of China was a consequence of civil war, not World War II. Both Kores and Vletnam were partitioned long after VE and VJ days, and Trieste, which seemed an agme of the insoluble, was sensibly settled years ago.

It was inevitable that Germany should be temporarily divided into administrative zones since it was not desirable that the victors' battalious should conjointly occupy conquered areas, given striking differences in their ideology, logistics and administrative methods.

It was also inevitable that Soviet troops entering Germany from the east and Allied troops entering ought at all times to play in Western from the west would have to meet at some preordained line to avoid battlefield confusion. But it was not necessary to divide Berlin as was done-or, perhaps, even to yield it. The Allies eventually ceded Mecklenburg. Thuringia and Saxony in exchange for West Berlin occupation rights and idiotically accepted this deal with no overland corridor linking the capital to the

Attack Plans

Gen. James M. Gavin, then commander of the 82d Airborne Division (later U.S. ambassador to France), recently wrote me that until April 24, 1945 (eight days before the Russians captured Berlin), American military commanders still Jan. 26, 1970, Gavin wrote: "We had made detailed plans for the First Allied Airborne Army to seize Berlin that spring . . . I re-member in great detail the planning that took place and the rehearsal that we conducted at an airfield not far from Sissonne, France. "Both Churchill and Eisenhower in their writings have discussed Berlin, but not that part of it I since have gone into the matter quite thoroughly, and about the only question remaining is-just how much information did Stalin have, and when did he receive it? "I am convinced that he knew by late February or early March, of '45, that we were going to stop on the Elbe. His exchange of telegrams with Eisenhower, therefore, was somewhat of a game." Gavin speaks of an Allied plan codenamed Operation Eclipse, which he understands is still classified "Top Secret" in Washington (25 years

Germans Had Copy

Apparently, this plan was circulated in the autumn of 1944 and, Gavin has heard: "The Germans obtained a copy and had it translated into German in January of 45. I have seen a photostat of the German copy. The question is-did the Russians have a copy at this time? It seems likely that in communicating with Stalin on they did."

Gavin suspects treason of a high civilian official might possibly have been involved, although "there are Marshal Tedder, or the combined other ways they could have ob- chiefs of staff. This is very strange wondered if they might conceivably tained a copy as well," He adds: indeed."

wrote a memorandum to the First Allied Airborne Army in which he said: It is believed the reaction of the German mind will be tremend-ously influenced by the personal appearance of individual soldiers whe participate in Operation Eclipse. It is the intention of this headquarters to take into Eclipse a dress as well as a field uniform." Nevertheless, the project was canceled. According to Gavin: "On April 24, 1945, the First Allied Atrborne Army sent a rather terse telegram to SHAEF [Elsenhower's headquarters] in which it stated that it was 'assuming' that airborne eperations would not be used in Berlin, and requested 'confirmstion or clarification.' The next day SHARF replied: 'Airborne operations to Berlin under Eclipse conditions will not be required. . . . "About the kindest thing that one could say about that affair was that it was all very perplexing. Did Elsenhower really intend from the very beginning to carry out Eclipse and stop on the Elbe? Or did he really intend to parachute into Berlin and seize it? I think we would have succeeded in capturing it if we had tried.

"One of the etrange things about Eisenhower's conduct, too, is that March 28, according to Churchill, he did not mention the subject either to his deputy, Air Chief

Nixon's Budget Hides Restrictions

WASHINGTON, Peb. 26 (NYT).—President Nixon's budget is probably a good deal more restrictive in its economic impact than appears on the surface, a new analysis reveals. The Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis has made the first breakdown of the budget on what is known as the high employment budget" concept. This modern method of anal-ysis adjusts the raw budget figures of receipts and outlays to give what economists regard as a more sophisticated picture of whether the budget is restrictive or expansionary, deflationary or inflationary.

The new analysis shows that by the second half of this calendar year, the budget on a "high employment" basis will show a massive surplus, at an annual rate of $13.1 billion, the largest in many years. In the first half the surplus will also be large, at $9.2 billion, about the same as the quarterly average for 1969.

Other Method Shows Stimulus By contrast, on the "national income accounts" basis which is close to the ordinary budget figures—the budget appears to swing sharply away from restraint and toward stimulus in this calendar year. The surplus on this basis reached a peak of $13.5 billion in the second quarter of last year. fell to $7 billion by the fourth quarter, will drop to balance in the first half of 1970 and will swing to a small deficit of $1.1 billion in the second balf of this year.

The crucial difference in the two concepts is their treatment of receipts. The ordinary and national income accounts budgets treat actual receipts or actually accrued tax liabilities. The "high employment" budget treats receipts as they would have been if the economy were operating at full employment capacity.

Prices Spurt

In January

PARIS, Feb. 26.-France's strug-

By Edwin L. Dale Jr.

The concept was developed about ten years ago to help explain a puzzle. The budget was constantly showing deficits and yet the economy continued sluggish. The explanation turned out to be that the sluggishness of the economy caused the deficits by holding down

Later in 1964 with this view in mind, tax rates were reduced. The economy picked up and the budget deficit, until Vietnam, was reduced. Receipts increased despite the tax

The conclusion drawn was that tax rates had been too high, relative to spending, even though the budget had been showing deficits. Reason for Marked Divergence

The reason for the marked expected divergence this year between the national income secounts and high employment budgets is the expected slowdown in the economy. Through most of the year, by the government's estimates, the economy will be operating at well below capacity. Thus, hypothetical "high employment" receipts are much larger than actual receipts—about $13 billion higher in the last half of 1970.

The "high employment" budget not only worked well in helping to explain the sing-gishness of the late 1950s and early 1960s, it also worked well in the opposite case—the ex-cessive budgetary stimulus and inflationary boom from late 1966 until the end of 1968.

Many analysts consider it to be the best measure of the impact of fiscal policy. If this view is right, as the St. Louis Fed reports, the President's "program is restrictive in its eco-nomic effects" and will tend to thwart any

Prime Rate Cut Isn't Followed by Big Banks

By Vartanig G. Vartan NEW YORK, Feb. 26 (NYT).— New York Stock Exchange prices retreated moderately today after their explosive rally late yesterday that gave the market its best advance of 1970. rance of 1970. The Dow Jones industrial average fell 3.83 to 764.45 after being down nearly 9 at 11:30 a.m., its low reading of the session.

The market displayed a kind of "morning-after" reaction to yesterday's upsurge of 13.86 points in the beliwether Dow. That rally had been triggered by plans of a small Philadelphia bank to reduce its prime lending rate to 8 percent from 6.5 percent.

However, the reaction of major banks across the country tagged such a rate cut as both unsound premature. Thus, selling came into the market today.

Moving lower were such recently strong groups as the banks and the mours and oils.

Volume on the Big Board, throttling back with the easing prices, slipped to 11.54 million shares from the previous 13.21 million shares. Great Western Financial, the most active issue, fell 1 3/4 to 22 1/4. Another savings-and-loan, running No. 3 in turnover, was Imperial Corp. of America, off 7/6 to 13 1/6. Prior to today's market action, savings-and-loan stocks had climb-ed inasmuch as this group would benefit from lower interest rates. Meanwhile, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board reported that sayings institutions sustained a deposit outflow of $1.4 billion in January, or more than 10 times the amount of total withdrawals one year earlier. When South's spade response was raised, he could, of course, have bid game directly, but he started to probe toward slam by bidding his secondary heart suit. North's three notrump rebid was somewhat discouraging, for it suggested some duplication of strength in the club suit and also threccard support in spades rather than four cards.

Nevertheless, South persever-ed with a cue-bid of four clubs, and finally abandoned his slam investigation when North signed off in four spades. Even the game contract proved difficult to make, with all the cards lying badly.

South's first move after winning the club lead with the ace was to finesse in diamonds. losing the queen to East's king.

The heart return was taken by the ace, and a diamond was led to the ace in dummy. South discarded his diamond loser on the club king, and played the remaining heart. This se-quence of plays was superior to leading the second round of hearts from the closed hand, for if East had held a singleton heart he would have had no opportunity to ruff a winner,

South won the second heart lead with the king and ruffed a heart with dummy's spade seven. East overruffed with the spade nine, and played the diamond four. That established dummy's last diamond, but it made no difference: East had one trump trick to come in any event, and that was the limit for the defense. After ruffing the diamond lead. South chose to ruff his remaining heart with the spade jack. East overruffed, and South made the balance without difficulty.

After ruffing the diamond, South could have played two trump winners, ending in dum-my, and then discarded his last heart on the 13th diamond.

THE DEATH OF THE PAST

By J. H. Plumb. Houghton Mifflin, 153 pp. Reviewed by Arthur Schlesinger Jr.

H. Plumb, professor of history at Cambridge University, is one of those British scholars whose range, erudition and facility drive American historians mad.

A specialist in 18th-century English history, he is well embarked on a major enterprise in this field-his splendid multivolume life of Sir Robert Wal-pole—while at the same time, in lectures, essays and reviews, he roams imperturbably through all centuries and continents and hands down judgment in lucid and authoritative phrases.

Thus The Death of the Past," a series of lectures origi-nally delivered in 1968 at the City College of New York, approaches its subject with a battery of references from Ssuma Chi'en, the "grand histori-an" of ancient China, and the Epic of Gilgamesh, "the earliest of Sumerica poors" through Guiceardini, Gibbon and Marx, to Marc Bloob, "the growtest historian of modern times."

Plumb's subject is the conflict between "the past" and "his-tory." Both these conceptions spring, of course, from the fact that something happened at some earlier time. But they make very different uses of that fact. "The past," in Mr. Plumb's usage, is essentially a means of legitimizing authority and status in the present: it implies "a created ideology with a purpose, designed to control individuals, or motivate societies, or inspire classes." Though "the past" obviously has its historical aspects, Plumb would sharply distinguish its function from the function of "history" -from the attempt to reconstruct the past in its own terms, to see things as they were, irrespective of what conflict this might create with what the wise ones of one's own society make of the past."

As for history, "until very recent times," Plumb writes, there was no history as we know it"-no history in the sense of a quest for truth conducted under professional stan-dards and through technical disciplines and marked by the purposeful search for documen-tation and evidence and by the relentless testing of generalization and hypothesis.

The new technical history found itself inevitably at war with the old myths and ideologies and therefore hastened the demise of "the past." But this demise, as Plumb perceptively argues, was part of a larger change, Static societies needed the past. In such societies, attitudes, skills, patterns of work and life, were handed down without much change from generation to generation; the past was always alive in the present. But the methods. process and forms of living of industrial society have no sanctions in the past and no permanence in the present. "Life is change, uncertainty, and only the present can have validity and that, maybe, not for long." The past is thus losing strength in all aspects of life... "The declension is obvious if we think first of Malory's Morte d'Arthur," then of Tennyson's 'Idylis of the King' and so Camelot.' From a myth char ed with social emotion, # h become a night's musical enter neal to historians to conce history in a way that will see the moral and social purposes "the past" without general myth and ideology. Monogram history, with its "limited obj tives and intentions," cannot the job, History must in turn interpret the desiry Plumb thinks, that it must the past to sanctify not suff ity or morality but reason.

He avows himself a qualifibeliever in the reality of gress as a result of the appl tion of human intelligence: is the duty of the historian teach this, to proclaim fidemonstrate it in order to humanity some confidence task that will still be cruel long—the resolution of the sions and antipathies that e within the human species."

This is a noble and brac ideal. As Flumb points out would liberate history. a man, from bigotzy, from nai al vanity, from class dom tion. Still, one may be per ted to wonder whether he is himself proposing one me version of "the past," if more congenial to the refments of historical technol-and to the values of a scient and industrial epoch; whether indeed, as one recalls the ! self may not be one r social myth.

Graham Hill Sheds Crutches, Plans 'To Have a Go' in S. Africa Grand Prix

LONDON, Feb. 26 (AP).—Former world champion Graham Hill said last night he would fly to South Africa over the weekend for the first grand prix auto race of the 1970 series. "My car is already there and I am planning to have a go, but whether I shall actually compete depends on how I shape up,"

Hill broke both his legs in the U.S. Grand Prix at Watkins Glen last October. His surgeons promised he would be fit to race again by Oct., 1970. Hill has maintained he would be back long before then.

He got rid of his crutches just after Christmas and appeared last night at a press conference without a walking stick. In the 1970 grand prix series, Hill will race in a Lotus for the private entrant Rob Walker. Despite his determination, racing circles believe the British ace will not compete in the South African Grand Prix, although he will probably turn in practice laps. It is understood that Brian Redman, another British driver, will pilot the Rob Walker car in the race.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Feb. 26 (NYT) .-The manager, Gil Hodges, was leaning against a batting cage, his cool precise eyes anapping pictures of the Mets. when someone asked: "How do they look this year?"

Hodges looked at the sky, glowering with the threat of rain at 11 an adjusted his martel.

threat of rain at 11 a.m., adjusted his mental light meter, snapped two more pictures, and said: "Too early to tell." Then he smiled, a private gesture that intimidates or warms people, according to their moods, and added: "Til know by 2 o'clock."

There is no strong sense of reality in base-ball spring training certainly not in the Mets' camp on this first day of full squad practice. It is generally conceded that the team has no openings, that it strengthened itself with trades during the winter, and that any new names on the roster will be due to catastrophe or an incredible flash of talent.

But men are trying. Bobby Pfiel, the "26th man," who didn't make the World Series squad, is working out as a catcher this spring. Now 26, the slim utility infielder wants to increase his value to this or some other club and after eight professional years perhaps last a full sea-son in the majors. He finds his biggest prob-lem is finding a comfortable position to catch. He considers himself a pretty good student of the game, and says that most big-league pitchers call their own games anyway.

Tha pitchers have been here for a week Jerry Koosman is fond of saying that he might not make this club if he was a rookle now, and he says it seriously enough to avoid sounding smug. But then he smiles and says that as a veteran he might be allowed a poor spring and still be on the roster opening day, thus spoil-

"From living it up," said the man, sourly. Vacationers, pensioners and local folks have come in numbers to watch the Mets at a recreation complex called Payson Field in a northern corner of the city. The Mets used to practice downtown, and many older and poorer people came to the early practice, old women who strolled out from nearby rooming houses and old men, knowledgeable fans, stained mahogany by years in this sun.

Among the recent visitors here was the base half commissioner. Bowie Kuhn, a tall, broad lawyer with a friendly smile and cheeks pinkening on his tour of the baseball camps. Kuhn called a press conference, strode into the room, whipped off his jacket, sat down and proceeded to say "no comment" to every question regarding the only two possible realities of this spring—the suspension of Denny McLain and the suit of Curt Flood.

Kuhn, in his firm though benevolent, fraternal yet lawyerly way—he is capable of saying "fellas" and "not one jot or tittle" in the same sentence-made it clear that baseball is being affected by the same crosswinds the rest of society is feeling. He said: "Boat rocking is somewhat typical of the times."

Another visitor was Louis Kleppel, old and stout, who cheered the Mets in 1962 down bere, wept for them as "balonies" in the Polo Grounds, and sat on a bench ...ear the clubhouse yesterday, comfortable in his characterhood and confiding to all. "This is not neces-sary, the Mets will repeat. They have a tight defensive unit. You heard it here."

Some of the best spots for today's boating require beaching and mooring in shallow water. No problem if you specified a Johnson OMC Stern Drive. Just touch a button and you're clear - that's the Johnson 75° power tilt. Tilts more than any other Stern Drive. And if you hit an underwater log or rock, the outdrive kicks free of trouble.

Power-tilt is only one of Johnson OMC's special features: smooth, fumble-free electric power shift, 90° pivot, stabilized power-cradle, world-wide service facilities, and a 2-year warranty.

Specify a Johnson OMC Stern Drive — it's designed specifically to let you boat anyplace.

WASHINGTON.—Instructions to workmen:

1. Newspaper delivery boys-Always leave the newspaper in a puddle of water in front of the customer's house. In ory periods when puddles are hard to find, carry a bucket of water to create puddles suitable for leaving the newspaper in as you go from customer to customer. One day each week hide the newspaper under a hedge or rose-bush From time to time. remove a large section of the newspaper and Baker hold it in the wind until its pages have all blown into the customer's tree. 2. Parking - lot attendants— Take great pains to park the car under a broken pipe that is leaking acid. First. however, inspect the car for fender dents. If dents are lacking. take the car into a subterranean room and, at a speed of about 15 miles an hour, drive it into a substantial concrete pillar built for the purpose. Note: if the car is more than one year old. It is enough merely to scrape a three-foot section of either side against the pillar. 3. Laundry workers -- When the customer's laundry has heen washed and ironed, select the shirt he will put on next week on the one day he is late for an extremely urgent appointment. Using a light chisel, crack an absolutely essential button (preferably on the collar or cuff) in such a way that it will not shatter into several picces in his hand uutil just the moment he thinks he has finished dressing.

4. Bank tellers-Always keep several acquaintances loltering in the bank with $2,000 in small change tied to their helts in leather bags. Upon seeing a customer enter the bank, im-mediately signal these friends to rush to your window and form a line ahead of him, Count each acquaintance's change twice. Upon finishing with the last one, tell the customer that you are sorry, but your window is now closed.

5. Cab drivers—Buy a handsome sign that says "off duty". Whenever it rains or snows with great intensity, drop whatever you are doing, get into a car, place sign in the window and drive about in dense traffic ignoring drowning or freezing supplicants.

6. Short-order cooks-Before making fresh coffee, always remember to remove last week's coffee grounds from the pot. Wash them carclessly with detergent and cold water before re-using them.

7. Bus drivers - Never take your bus cut alone. Wait at the terminal until five or six other buses have gathered so that all of you may travel together. Since an entraordinary number of potential passengers will have accumulated on street corners while your bus was awaiting companionship, you may be subject to crowding and discom-fort if you pick them up. This can be avoided by disploying a destination sign that says. "out of service." While rushing past passengers without slowing down. If you must pull to the curb. always make certain that the rear of the bus Is left sticking into the center of the street, in order to block two full lanes

8. Policemen, firemen and ambulance drivers-Before driving your emergency vehicles through a sleeping residential neighborhood between 3 and 6 a.m. always be certain that a fellow policeman, fireman or ambulance driver is posted nearby at a telephone. In the event there is one house or apartment in which nobody awakens and comes to the window cursing, he is to call instantly for more police cars, fire trucks and ambulances.

9. Ticket salesmen in box office-Always take extraordinary pains to learn precisely where the customer would like to sit. Explain that seats in that partlcular section are all sold out. Ask If there is some section of the arena or theater that he despises. Tell him you happen to have two extremely bad sents in that section. Using a system of bell signals, notify an attendant inside the theater or arena to erect a large post immediately in front of the two seats you have just sold the customer. If you are working at a theater tell the star of the show to take the night off with a severe case of flu and give the understudy a chance If at an arena, make sure it rains heavily, after alerting several thousand cab drivers to come to the stadium with their "off duty" signs.

Van Gogh's "Le Cyprès et Arbre en Fleurs," which was auctioned to an anonymous buyer.

Record $1.3 Million for Van Gogh Work

NEW YORK, Feb. 26 (NYT).-A painting by Vincent van Gogh of cypress trees rising from a cornfield into a sky of swirling clouds posted a world record for the artist at auction last night, bringing $1,300,000.

The previous auction record of $420,000 for a Van Gogh, a portrait that was sold in 1966. was outdistanced twice in last night's sale of Impressionist. post-Impressionist and modern paintings at the Parke-Bernet Galleries.

"Le Cyprès et l'Arbre en Fleurs," the big prize of the sale. Went to a buyer who asked the gallerles not to divulge his country or residence. Shortly after this was knocked down. Van Gogh's "Le Laboureur" was sold for $875.000 to the Beyeler Gallery of Zurich, Switzerland. Both paintings came out of Van Gogh's great period, during the desperate year before his suicide in 1890, which the artist spent in a hospital at St. Remy.

Scattered applause broke out among about 1,500 persons seated and standing in two galleries when the cypress plece reached its zenith. An audience in one

According to gallery spokesmen, the sale was an unqualified success. It start-ed out somewhat slowly: a few paintings at the beginning went for lower prices than had been expected. But the tempo of the sale quickened and at the close chalked up a total of $5,852,250, a world record for a sale of this kind and size—73 works of art.

A larger sale of similar composition, on Oct. 15, 1959, at Parke-Bernet, previously held the world's record at $4,423,250.

Organizers of the "Vasaloppet" cross-country ski race held at Stockholm have admitted that the event for men only was won last year by a woman. Valiraud Nothaft, 30, of Holzkirchen, West Germany, donned a beard and, in what turned out to be a Sadie Hawkins day in reverse, outdistanced more than 8,000 males over mountains, frozen lakes and wooded terrain. Only one of her competitors, Berhard Brokowsky, found her out. "I suspected from her way of skiing it was a woman," he said. "The beard bobbed in a funny way. So I shouted You got icicles in your beard. She reacted instinctively and pulled at her beard. It fell off." He kept her secrei, however. An organizer guaranteed there will be no woman in this year's "Vasaloppet," to be run this weekend. How will they tell? Supposing Valtraud doesn't wear a beard this time.
